Now that it feels like summer outside and also on campus, I have taken the opportunity to do some leisurely reading. (Actually, if the truth be known, in addition to reading books, I have grown accustomed to audio books as I drive.) I highly suggest one of my most recent reads, A Man Called Ove by Fredrik Backman. Ove is a grumpy and old curmudgeon, living in Sweden, who finds his world turned upside down when a young family moves in next door. It is a humorous and engaging tale of the transformational power of love through the ups and downs, struggles and joys that we discover in our relationships with others.

This summer we will again have our Day of Giving. Last year our goal was $5000. and we were able to raise over $6000. To do this again, we are going to need the help of everyone. As you being to see the Facebook posts, please share with others the good things that are happening for students through Newman here at RIT. If everyone can help just a bit, once again, we will be able to reach out goal.

Enjoy this long weekend, and take some time to breathe and remember the goodness of the God who meets us each and everyday. Have a great week!

Peace and good,
Alice MN
